On May 4, 2022 energy efficiency aficionado Natalie King, CEO of Dunamis Clean Energy Partners and Dunamis Charge (a wholly-owned subsidiary of DCEP), will be speaking at TEDxWaterStreet REImagine 2022 in New York City. With the topic of climate change and the sustainability crisis needing great ideas, Natalie will speak on how "recharging" ourselves enables our internal, innate power to bring about significant social change.

The innovative EV charger manufacturer will share her insight on why recharging is an important element in drawing from our own potency and resilience. When we are depleted physically, emotionally, or spiritually, it can be difficult to bring about meaningful change in the world.

Natalie believes as a global community, we need to extract the power that we all have to innovate and create solutions to those needs. Creatives and doers understand that the creative process can be taxing on both the mind and body - often sacrificing wellbeing in the name of yielding results.

Noting how a power nap recharged her and grew her company, we all have an opportunity to strengthen our connection to ourselves and others, ultimately allowing us to make meaningful contributions to society.

TEDxWaterStreet will welcome Natalie and other like-minded thought-leaders who are intentional about REimagining the world as thinkers, leaders, friends, and community members to bring about a new perspective on how we can REImagine and press forward in a post-covid era. It will challenge human discomfort with obstacles and instead celebrate the strength that accompanies curiosity and the ability to dream. TEDxWaterStreet will speak the language of possibility and foster a rediscovery of what the future holds for our shared humanity. While this is an invite-only event, some tickets have been reserved for the general public and are now available at fixr.co/event/565928780.
